It worked for me

A bracelet cured my migraine

Jilly Anderton, 48, from Storrington, West Sussex, put an end to years of migraines with the Magna therapy bracelet

Since I was a teenager I've had agonising migraines. Painkillers and herbal remedies didn't work, nor did lying in a darkened room. Then my husband suggested I try magnetism. I thought he was joking until he bought me a [REDACTED]. After I'd worn it for a month I found that, although I still got the familiar feeling of a migraine developing, it would quickly fade and disappear.

I've worn my bracelet for two years now and, although I still get the odd headache, the migraines have almost completely disappeared.
